FCC TO HOLD CLEAN TECHNOLOGY SHOWCASE ON MAY 18

Washington, D.C. -- Federal Communications Commission Chairman Julius Genachowski and Secretary of Energy Steven Chu will host a Clean Technology Showcase at FCC Headquarters on May 18. A number of leading technology companies will exhibit solutions for smarter grids and homes, as well as for sustainable information and communications technologies. The showcase is free and open to the public. Registration is not required.

Promoting clean technology solutions is a key recommendation of the Federal Communications Commission's National Broadband Plan, delivered to Congress in March. The plan highlights the transformative role broadband can play in meeting our national energy and environmental goals, including energy independence, greenhouse gas emissions reductions, and clean energy generation.

WHAT: Clean Technology Showcase
WHO: Chairman Julius Genachowski, FCC
Secretary Steven Chu, Department of Energy
WHEN: Tuesday, May 18th from 2:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.
WHERE: Federal Communications Commission
Commission Meeting Room
445 12th St. SW
Washington, D.C. 20554
